

Professor Tetsuo Endoh received the "6th Fellow Award of Japan Society of Applied Physics"

Professor Tetsuo Endoh received the "6th Fellow Award of Japan Society of Applied Physics".

This prize is awarded to individuals who have remarkable contributed to the progress of applied physics through the continuous activities in Japan Society of Applied Physics. The award ceremony will be held on September 11, 2012 at the 73rd Japan Society of Applied Physics Autumn Meeting.

The title of the accomplishment and details for this award are as follows.

Title of the Accomplishment :

Development of Nonvolatile Memories and Pioneering Researches on Three-Dimensional Structured Memories and Logics

Details for this award : <http://www.jsap.or.jp/english/awards/jsap-fellow-2012.html>